State of Cybersecurity in Financial Institutions

RUSS HORN

President, CoNetrix

Between November 1, 2018 and January 31, 2019, CoNetrix surveyed cybersecurity professionals working in the financial institution industry to learn about cybersecurity trends such as:

- How involved is the Board in the cybersecurity program?
- How do institutions manage cybersecurity and is it proving to be effective?
- What training standards and best practices exist?

With 243 responses from across the United States (approximately 80% banks, 14% credit unions, 6% other financial institutions) we found some fascinating answers! Join us in this session to hear about the significant findings that can show you how you measure up to the industry and where to look next to improve your cybersecurity standing.

The Risk Assessment Experience

ALYSSA PUGH

Support Manager, Tandem

When tasked with the responsibility of creating a risk assessment, it can be difficult to take the first steps, and even more challenging to persevere through the process. In this interactive session, we will revisit the foundational elements of a risk assessment, review Tandem features that can streamline your process, and experience building a totally new asset-based risk assessment together in Tandem.

Security & Technology

You're a QA Engineer for Windows 10. Now What?

CHRIS BREWER

Senior Network Engineer, CoNetrix Technology

It's already been four years since Windows 10 was initially released. System administrators had to change their mindset on approving and installing updates to this "new" operating system, but it often feels as if we are beta testers for Microsoft's flagship product. In this session, we will review the Windows 10 and Office patching model and how to effectively approach patch management.
